I was a Microsoft user since the days of Dos 6.22.

I've used every version of windows from Win 2 to win XP and every time I have felt that my money investment was unjustified in the company.

I have since switched over to linux (this is being written from work on an ME box) as my primary desktop, as well as my file/print server.

I have found it to be a much better investment in time and resources, as it provides a constant stream of updates, and feature enhancements, and provides a strong community of free support on every aspect of the operating system.
